Project funding guidelines

missio

glauben.leben.geben.
The International Catholic Mission Societies missio in Aachen and missio in Munich constitute the German branch of the Pontifical Mission Societies. They have a dual task:
– to raise and strengthen the missionary awareness of the faithful as a community of learning, prayer, and solidarity in Germany;
– to provide both financial and non-material support for the mission of local Churches in Africa, Asia, and Oceania.

The Gospel of the Kingdom of God promises all human beings holistic liberation. Individuals, communities, and societies within the Church work together, contributing their individual skills and expertise, to serve the goal of liberation, which is fraught with many different hardships and challenges. The main focus of missio’s cooperation work is on the pastoral work of the Church.

In the spirit of the Gospel and within the scope of its project funding activities, missio supports local Church initiatives that – promote pastoral care and the development of the Church life;
– are rooted in the Christian vision of the world and of humankind and that are, in terms of the form they take,
based on basic Christian values;
– take into account local cultural, religious, socio-economic and political circumstances when defining their objectives and content;
– promote ecumenical co-operation between the Churches;
– promote dialogue between religions and world views;
– work towards justice, peace, and the integrity of creation;
– enable people to stand up for those who are powerless, oppressed, persecuted and without rights and those who seek to foster disadvantaged groups within both the Church and society as a whole;
– are in line with the principle of subsidiarity.
missio provides funding for:
- the establishment and development of training centres (especially major seminaries and novitiates)
- courses, seminars, workshops for groups
- individual scholarships
- collective scholarships from Church training centres and formation institutions missio does not provide funding for:

- minor seminaries
- schools and general teacher-training

Individual project types

1. Planning pastoral processes/programmes
missio helps its partners to draw up and implement pastoral programmes, involving as many people as possible. These pastoral programmes are based on an analysis of prevailing social conditions and pastoral challenges.

2. Training and continuing professional development and on-going formation
The training and continual professional development and on-going formation of lay people working for the Church, men and women religious (only those who have completed their canonical novitiate year) and clerics in the following areas: pastoral work, spirituality, theology, philosophy, and associated subjects, as well as other training courses (also those that are not academic) that support the mission and the self-reliance of the local Church.

4. Proclamation and pastoral programmes
- (first) evangelisation (establishing parish catechesis, etc.)
- inculturation (also in the field of art)
- biblical apostolate (bible courses, bible sharing method, etc.)
- pastoral programmes for special target groups
  - for couples (including preparation for marriage) and families
  - for women (establishment and networking of women’s groups, promotion of gender equality, single-parent families, etc.)
  - for youth (training group leaders, establishment and networking of youth groups, etc.)
  - for refugees, drug addicts, prostitutes, disabled people, prisoners, orphans, children who live on the street, child soldiers, etc.
  - for those affected by Aids (education, advice, care, etc.)
  - for counselling and trauma healing

3. Establishing and strengthening local Churches and religious communities
- parishes and communities (small Christian communities, parish councils, parish development, etc.)
- structures and bodies at diocesan level, congregational level, and higher levels
- synods, conferences, symposia, etc.
- analyses and evaluations (including academic work in the service of pastoral development and planning)

An application for project funding shall only be processed by missio if it meets the above-mentioned criteria.

Every project submitted for consideration to missio should be part of the detailed elaboration and implementation of a longer-term pastoral plan that was drawn up in conjunction with all those who are responsible for pastoral work in a diocese, region, congregation or movement. This aspect must be emphasized in the application.

On request, missio can get involved in such longer-term pastoral planning processes, providing advice and funding.

Applications can only be submitted in those cases where the project owner’s local resources are insufficient. The project owner’s local contribution must always be as high as possible.

Several applications may be submitted every year. If possible, these applications should be submitted to missio at the same time or should be combined and submitted as a single application. Applications must be ranked according to their priority. These priorities are determined by the longer-term pastoral plans and the corresponding objectives. Country-specific funding profiles apply in addition to these general guidelines. Moreover, detailed explanations and guidelines exist for certain types of projects.

For more information, please contact the relevant country officer at missio.

Scholarships for Europe and America are, as a rule, only granted in cases where the intended training and/or further professional development is not available in the country in question or in another African, Asian, or Latin American country.

1. Project registration missio shall register project applications and allocate a project number to them. This project number should be included in all subsequent correspondence relating to the application.

2. Decision on the project
   The relevant bodies at missio shall consider the project application and make a decision on it. If necessary, missio shall commission an external expert opinion on the project before making a decision. missio shall then inform the project owner, applicant and person responsible for the project in writing of its decision. If the application is approved, the project owner will receive a letter of approval, which contains a contract form. The project owner must fill out the contract form, sign it, and send the original to missio.

   If the application is not approved, the project owner will receive a letter of rejection. In many cases, a lack of resources makes rejection unavoidable.

3. Project implementation
   Once missio receives the contract form, it transfers the relevant sum and sends a letter of notification about the transfer and an acknowledgment of receipt form. Once the money is received, this form must be filled out, signed – where possible by the project owner and the beneficiary – and returned by post to missio with written confirmation from the bank that the money has been received (copy of the bank voucher). missio must be notified about any delay in the implementation of the project. This notification must include the reason for the delay and its expected duration. missio’s consent must be sought before the objective of a project is changed. If this consent is not sought or if the funds provided are misappropriated, missio reserves the right to demand repayment of the transferred sum.

   In the event of payment by instalments, missio shall only transfer the next instalment once it has received an interim narrative and financial report.
4. Project report and project completion
The project owner is responsible for making sure that a final narrative and financial report is sent to missio once the project has been completed. The original final report must be signed and sent to missio. The narrative and financial report shall be checked by a number of different departments both inside and outside missio. missio reserves the right to send representatives with the mandate to verify the proper use of funds. All original project documents must be archived for ten years after the end of the project so that they may be inspected if necessary. These documents must be made available to missio on request.

4.1. The narrative part of the report
The narrative part of the report provides a description of the implementation of a project, including its positive and negative impacts and any difficulties encountered during its implementation. It provides information on the objectives (achieved), the measures implemented, the duration, the forecast sustainable impacts and a comparison of all these aspects with what was written in the project application.

The conclusions that can be drawn from the project for future pastoral work are of particular importance.

Depending on the project type, the narrative section of the final report should contain the following information:

4.1.1. Planning pastoral processes/programmes
- number, gender, age, and social background of the participant(s)
- number of events and measures, location and duration
- methods and didactics
- results, documents, conclusions

4.1.2. Training and continuing professional development and on-going formation

- skill(s)/qualification(s) acquired; changes regarding possible areas of work
- feedback from the participant(s)/target group(s)

Individual scholarships:
- copy of reports, certificates, (academic) degree

- themes and contents
- methods and didactics
- skill(s)/qualification(s) acquired; changes regarding possible areas of work
- feedback from the participant(s)/target group(s)

8 In the case of comprehensive programmes, missio requires a short summary of the most important aspects (max. two pages). This should come at the beginning of the narrative section of the report. It is followed by a detailed description of the implemented measures and the results achieved.
4.1.4. Proclamation and pastoral programmes
– location and duration (from ... to ...) number, gender, age, and social background of the participant(s) or the target group(s)
– names and qualifications/profiles of the trainers/resource persons
– themes and contents
– methods and didactics
– skill(s)/qualification(s) acquired; changes regarding possible areas of work

– maintenance/repair funds

4.1.7. Self-help and livelihood
– investment/expected income, profitability
– long-term impact and sustainability

The narrative section of the report should, if possible, contain a few relevant photos.

4.2. The financial part of the report
In principle, the financial part of the report adheres to the same structure as the cost calculation and the financing plan for the project application and provides the following information (see appended diagram):
– accounting period
– itemization of all financial contributions to the project (from missio and other organizations as well as local contribution(s)) given in the local currency and in euros or US dollars
– itemization of all expenditure

Copies of invoices must be provided for larger items of expenditure (such as media, resources, vehicles as well as fixtures and fittings). Smaller items of expenditure (e.g. purchases at market) should be combined. If the project partner submits to missio a financial report compiled by a chartered accountant, individual evidence (e.g. invoices) is not required.

All original invoices and documents must be archived for ten years and made available to missio on request.
